ON THE PREMISES OF THE "BEE HIVE," to take place on or about the 4th of September next, 1844.

SALES BY AUCTION

NOTICE—POSITIVELY
BY MR. STUBBS,

BLANCH'S GEORGE STREET PROPERRY,

THIS DAY, 28TH AUGUST, 1844,
AT THE MART, KING-STREET,

Sale commencing at Twelve o'clock,

☞ The representation of the various Houses, Shops, Manufactory, Foundry, and Premises, as arranged in this sale, is so fully laid before the public in the advertising columns of this journal, and so well explained on the map and lithographs now in circulation, that the auctioneer feels little inclined to express further satisfaction, or descant more on this point, however important a part of the sale. He, however, puts it to the judgment and common sense of any man, especially if a Guardian, Trustee, or Agent for parties abroad, whether it be possible to point out a better channel for the faithful disposal of a trust duty, than by investing the funds in the purchase of freehold or leasehold house property in the City of Sydney? meaning thereby of such a class as these are. Houses that are always wanted, and therefore never can be badly tenanted.

Besides, these houses have not suffered like others, from the badness of the times, nor ever can in the way of rents, as long as ever George-street is the north and south line of all the custom and business of the colony.

P.S. It may be observed, there is not a drapery between King and Market Street. It is much wanted, and where can be a better shop than one of these?

P S. At least 20 per cent. may be reckoned as an immediate return on capital! and what d'ye get by the Banks? 2607

UNPRECEDENTED OPPORTUNITY they will have at this sale of investing it to more profitable and permanent advantage. The bills will not bear interest—thus extending a bona fide credit of three and six months upon the purchase of a property, the aggregate rental of which produces a qualification equal to the high honour of an M. L. C., or representative of the city of Sydney.

MR. STUBBS is honored with instructions to announce to Capitalists, Moneyed Men, and all Persons interested in the purchase of most unexceptionable

THE NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

We received yesterday files of English papers to May 13th, and Irish papers one day later.

The most important political news is the terms upon which it was intended to renew the Bank of England Charter, which were propounded by Sir R. PEEL in the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted by the House of Commons. Sir R. PEEL's speech on the currency was generally admitted to have been a masterpiece; we shall endeavour to find room for it in the Herald:—

1. That it is expedient to continue to the Bank of England, for a time to be limited, certain of the privileges now by law vested in that corporation, subject to such conditions as may be provided by any act to be passed for that purpose. 2. That it is expedient to provide by law that the Bank of England should henceforth be divided into two separate departments, one exclusively confined to the issue and circulation of notes, the other to the conduct of banking business. 3. That it is expedient to limit the amount of securities upon which it shall henceforth be lawful for the Bank of England to issue promissory notes payable in bearer on demand, and that such amount shall only be increased under certain conditions to be prescribed by law. 4. That it is expedient to provide by law that a weekly publication should be made by the Bank of England of the state both of the circulation and of the banking department. 5. That it is expedient to repeal the law which subjects the notes of the Bank of England to the payment of the composition for stamp duty. 6. That in consideration of the privileges to be continued to the Bank of England, the rate of fixed annual payment to be made by the bank to the public shall be £180,000 per annum, and shall be defrayed by deducting the said sum from the sum now by law payable to the Bank, for the management of the public debt. 7. That in the event of any increase of the securities upon which it shall be lawful for the Bank of England to issue such promissory notes as aforesaid, a further annual payment shall be made by the Bank of England to the public, over and above the said fixed payment of £180,000, equal in amount to the net profit derived from the promissory notes issued on such additional securities. 8. That it is expedient to prohibit by law the issue of promissory notes payable to bearer on demand by any bank not now issuing such notes, or by any bank hereafter to be established in any part of the United Kingdom. 9. That it is expedient to provide by law that such banks in England and Wales as now issue promissory notes payable to bearer on demand shall continue to issue such notes, subject to such conditions and to such limitations as to the amount of issue as may be provided for by any act that may be passed for that purpose. 10. That it is expedient to provide by law for the weekly publication of the amount of promissory notes payable to bearer on demand, circulated by any bank authorised to issue such notes. 11. That it is expedient to make further provision by law with regard to joint-stock banking companies.

The Duke of RICHMOND, in moving for some returns respecting the imports of wool into England, signified his intention of opposing the proposed abolition of the duty on Foreign wool, which he said would be injurious to the English farmer and to the Australian settler.

Among the deaths we notice the Duchess of PORTLAND, Mr. BECKFORD, and Mr. WILBRAHAM: the latter causes a vacancy in the representation of South Lancashire.

The Marquis of BUTE was HER MAJESTY'S Commissioner to the Church of Scotland for the present year.

Despatches from New South Wales were received in Downing-street on the 5th May.

The New Zealand Company had given notice that they had determined to suspend all operations respecting the Colony of New Edinburgh, until they had received "intelligence that an eligible site had been assigned by the GOVERNOR of New Zealand."

We mentioned yesterday that the decision of O'CONNELL's case stood over until the next Term. There was only a fortnight's vacation: Trinity Term commencing on the 22nd May.

The commercial news was unimportant. Wool was steady, and no prospect of a fall. 2144 sellrd hides from New South Wales sold at 2½d. to 3½d. per lb. 26 casks New South Wales tallow sold at 38s. 6d. to 39s. per cwt. Mimosa bark was quoted at £7 10s. to £8 12s. 6d. per ton. Sperm oil was sold for £72 10s. to £74 10s. per tun; and head matter at £78. Black oil was sold on the 18th May at £28 to £29 per tun. Seven tuns Southern whalebone sold at £198 to £200 per tun.

Some interesting extracts will be found in another part of the paper.

THE DREDGING MACHINE.

OUR readers will remember that a few weeks since, a large number of the inhabitants of the Hunter River districts petitioned the GOVERNOR that the steam dredging machine might be sent to the Hunter, to deepen the passage over the sand flats above Newcastle. This petition was presented to the GOVERNOR last week by the deputation, and the following is given by the Maitland Mercury as the result of the interview:—

The deputation met at the Council Chamber this morning, and afterwards went to Government House. The five Port Phillip members had just had an interview with his Excellency to prevail on him to make Geelong a free port, and had taken the opportunity to urge upon him a claim for the dredging machine. The deputation having announced their business, presented the petition, and expressed their readiness to enter into any details connected with it.

His Excellency stated that we could not have the dredging machine for the following reasons: 1. That it had been sent out for the use of the harbour of the capital, Sydney, alone, and was not more than sufficient for that purpose. 2. That it would not be sufficient for the clearing out of the Hunter, and that if we had it, Geelong would have an equal right to it; that it could not be sent everywhere: that local wants must be supplied by local funds: that the merchants and Council of Sydney would be complaining if he sent it away; that Port Phillip would complain; that the Port Phillip deputation was free to our three; and that if it could be spared he supposed he must leave us to discuss with those gentlemen who should have it. 3. That he had no money; that he was pressed on all hands to incur expenses that the falling state of the revenue would not support; but that he was determined not to make engagements which would only end by leading his government into debt.

The deputation answered to the first point, that the machine was actually idle, and that the Sydney people, even if they had any superior claim, could not complain of its being used elsewhere when not used for them. To the second, that his Excellency had very much misconceived the nature of the work to be done, as the deputation were assured on good authority that the obstructions to be removed were very trifling, and that the work could be speedily accomplished by the machine; that the river was not under the control of any local authority; that the deputation represented a population of 24,000 people, whose interests were at stake in the matter. To the third we replied that if the Government would undertake the work, and there was no public funds available, we had no doubt the district felt itself so vitally interested in the matter that it would be able to raise the requisite funds by subscription; that one gentleman had already promised the use of his steamer to tow the machine down, or, if that were not thought necessary, £50 towards the work.

His Excellency replied, that people always underrated the expense of a work they wanted the government to commence; that his education as an engineer satisfied him that it must be an expensive work; that although the river was not in any district, the legislature could unite several districts into one, and place the river in it; that although the machine now lay idle, it was always being occasionally used; that undoubtedly our being ready to come forward with money was a test of sincerity, and of the actual want of the district, which he was willing to adopt; that we ought, however, to collect the money first, and then apply to the government.

The deputation rejoined that they were not aware the government would place the river under the control of the district, having refused to place Port Jackson under the control of the Sydney Council, and they begged to know what sum it would be necessary to subscribe to entitle them to come again to the government.

His Excellency said, that he had refused to allow the harbour of Port Jackson to be under the control of the Sydney Corporation, because he had reason to believe they would have made a revenue out of it; but the Hunter River was different, as that would be a source of expense; but that if we came forward with £10,000 the matter might be again considered. His Excellency being informed that there was no such sum in the district, said that £1000 would place us in a very different position from what we now occupied.

We were then bowed out.

As this account is stated to have been written by a member of the deputation, we presume it is correct; but we must confess we cannot understand the first reason assigned by the GOVERNOR for refusing to accede to the request of the petitioners. The machine was not sent out for the use of Sydney alone, but was ordered to be sent out, on a vote of the Legislative Council; and as it has been paid for out of the funds of the entire colony, we cannot see why any particular portion of the colony can be considered to have any exclusive claim upon it. Sydney is the capital of the entire colony, and if it is required in Sydney, it will be quite right to keep it there until the work is completed; but no unnecessary delay should take place. As to the merchants of Sydney complaining if it was sent away, we can only say that we do not believe they would trouble their heads about it; and if they did, their complaint, like all other unjust complaints, would deserve to be treated with neglect.

Next to Sydney we think the Hunter has a claim for the services of the dredging machine, on account of the amount of population in the districts, and the great traffic on the Hunter. How far the machine would be serviceable in deepening the channel to allow vessels drawing ten feet water to pass at all states of the tide is a purely practical question, which can only be determined upon minute survey and calculation, and we would suggest to Mr. WINDEYER, who has a motion on the paper this evening for an address to the GOVERNOR, praying that a sum may be placed upon the estimates to defray the expense of sending the dredging machine to the Hunter, that it would be better to frame an address for a survey and estimate of expense in the first instance, and in the mean time the Committee on the Circular Quay might be directed to report what number of days the dredging machine has worked during the last eight months, and how far it is necessary that it should be retained in Sydney.

The question of expense we think was not fairly met by the GOVERNOR. Deepening the channel of the Hunter is no more a local work than the South Head Lighthouse, or the Sydney Custom House, and it is as just that one should be charged on the general revenue as the other.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CROWN LAND GRIEVANCES.

II.

In examining the "claim now put forth by the Executive to raise a revenue from Crown lands, not only without the aid, but without the consent or advice, of the legislature," the Committee draws bold line of distinction between "the domain lands of the Crown, the private estate of the Sovereign, the portion allotted to him in the original partition among the conquerors," and the territory of newly-discovered countries. They argue, however, that even setting aside this distinction, and conceding that the waste lands of colonies are "as much the private estate of HER MAJESTY as Windsor Park or Whittlebury Forest," yet by the statute 1 Victoria, c. 2, the right of the Crown to the revenues arising therefrom was solemnly surrendered during the life of HER MAJESTY in favour of the consolidated fund of the empire, in consideration of a Civil List of £385,000. Now, mark what follows. If the waste lands of New South Wales are part of the Sovereign's hereditary domains, all the income derived from them, whether by sale, lease, licenses of occupation, or otherwise, belongs of right to the consolidated fund of Great Britain; and the Act of Council, 2 Victoria, No. 27, called the Crown Lands Occupation Act, in applying that income to local purposes, "is void to all intents and purposes, as tending to defraud the consolidated fund, and repugnant to the laws of England." This inference is inevitable, and, if practicable, should be followed out, were it of serious consequence. If colonial lands form part of the hereditary domains, then ought the whole of their proceeds during the last fourteen years (that is, since the commencement of His late MAJESTY's reign,) to have been remitted to the Lords of the Treasury; and in having applied them otherwise, Sir GEORGE GIPPS and HIS EXCELLENCY two prudes sors have violated the royal "compact" with the House of Commons. The only escape from this reductio ad absurdum is by relinquishing the feudal claim which involves it; and the Report proves, as well by the authority of BLACKSTONE as by general reasoning, that "the notion that all property in land is derived from the King was a mere fiction of the Norman lawyers," introduced nineteen years after the Conquest, and "never acquiesced in by the English nation as any thing more than a fiction." Pursuing the argument from the ownership of land to the use of natural herbage, it is urged that as by the ancient law every owner of land was allowed to feed his cattle on the lord's waste, "the analogy of law would seem to imply that these waste lands stand to the settled parts of the colony in the relation of a vast common, to which, until it be appropriated, all HER MAJESTY's subjects have, of common right, free access, subject only to such regulations as are necessary to preserve peace and order."

Having thus disposed of the abstract question of legal right, the Report proceeds to matters of fact. In the return recently printed, of correspondence between the Government and the Commissioners of Crown Lands, there is a note, presumed to have come from the pen of HIS EXCELLENCY, to the effect, that the fifty-six largest licensees beyond the boundaries depasture very nearly eighteen times as much stock, for the same money, as the fifty-six smallest. This misrepresentation is founded upon that suppressio veri of which we have had to complain in former statements from the same quarter; namely, the entire suppression of the assessment. Why this, by far the heaviest of the graziers' burthens, and by far the most productive source of revenue, should be thus systematically concealed from observation, we cannot account on any sound or honest principle. The Report, however, supplies what the note keeps back; and thereby demonstrates that the fact, so far from being as represented in the note, is, that the fifty-six large graziers pay to the Government £56528 per annum, while the fifty-six small ones pay only £843, being in the proportion of more than 6½ to 1. We must really complain very seriously of this practice of garbling the truth. When the Government wish to make out that the graziers do not pay the expenses of the border police, the license fee is omitted; and when they wish to make out that the largest graziers pay no more than the smallest, then the assessment is omitted! Is this fair? Is it honest?

The Report, moreover, shows, most conclusively, that besides this inaccuracy in point of fact, the note is fallacious in principle. Our space, however, forbids us to dwell much upon this portion. One short paragraph appears to us to furnish a triumphant answer to the allegation, so often made and dwelt upon, that the £10 license bovers in some instances ten or twenty times more land than in others:—

"Some parts of the colony are mere deserts, no number of acres of which will feed a sheep; in others stock may be done with little more than a single acre; in others, the stations cannot be occupied more than a few months at a time, from want of water."

Hence the justice of the Committee's inference, that the only intelligible measure of the value of a station, "is the quantity of stock which it is able to support in an average season." Tried by this and other tests, which are confirmed by the whole tenour of the evidence, oral and written, private and official, the regulations of the 2nd of April must, it is observed, be pronounced both oppressive and impracticable. Those of the 3rd of April (sent home per General Hewett) are admitted to be an improvement upon the others, but are still very objectionable; particularly as being calculated to perpetuate a pernicious principle which has generally been adopted with reference to Crown lands—"that of purchasing one thing nominally, and another really;" such as buying so many measured acres of land at so much per acre, when the main inducement with the buyer was water frontage, or command of back run, without which the measured acres would in some instances not have been worth a fifth of the price paid for them.

3. COMMISSIONERS OF CROWN LANDS WITHIN THE BOUNDARIES.—The grievances complained of under this head are—1. That the Commissioners (who are Government Surveyors) are encouraged by a premium to oppress the occupants of Crown lands within the counties, inasmuch as they are rewarded by a commission (in some cases so high as 25 per cent.) upon their increase which may be made, by their exertions, in the revenue derived from leases or licenses; thereby constituting them a sort of spies and common informers. 2. That the rent of these lands was raised, in 1839, from £4 to £6 per section, which has been found to operate oppressively to the renters and injuriously to the revenue. 3. That the mode of letting is such as to facilitate the establishment of bad characters upon these lands, "which must act injuriously, as a question of police, upon the districts generally."

4. COMMISSIONERS BEYOND THE BOUNDARIES.—The grievances on this head are—1. That the powers of the Commissioners, even at present, are arbitrary and unconstitutional in the highest degree, the Committee believing "that there is no functionary in HER MAJESTY's dominions who is entrusted with such absolute power over the property of his fellow subjects; and, 2. That under the Regulations of the 2nd of April, these already overgrown powers would be still further amplified.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 27.

THE SPEAKER took the chair at the usual hour.

PASTORAL REGULATIONS.

Mr. ROBINSON presented petitions—one from sixty-nine stockholders and others resident in the neighbourhood of Moreton Bay, and another from sixty-six stockholders and others residing in the Clarence River district, against the pastoral regulations recently promulgated.

The petitions were read, and ordered to be received.

THE LATE REGISTRAR MANNING.

Dr. NICHOLSON presented two petitions from Mr. John Gilchrist, as the agent of the representatives of G. G. Berry, late of Jamison-street, Sydney, and of William A. Thomson, late of Sydney, both deceased, bankrupts. Mr. Manning, it appeared, had collected a considerable amount of property in both estates; in the case of G. G. Berry, the sum of £928 had been realised at sales by auction, by Mr. Lyons, of goods consigned to Berry, which arrived here after his decease. This money had been received by Mr. Manning; but the only portion of it which could now be recovered from Mr. Manning, was a dividend of £12 3s. 8d.; in the estate of Thompson there was not even a dividend.

Both petitions were read and received.

INTEREST.

Mr. FOSTER gave notice, that on Tuesday next he should move for leave to bring in a bill to regulate the amount of interest in this colony.

QUESTIONS AND REPLIES.

Mr. WINDEYER said he would take this opportunity of making some inquiries of which he had already given notice to the Colonial Secretary; first, whether any communication had been received by the Government relative to the expenses of the culture of wheat in Canada, on the subject of which an address had been voted to the Governor during the last session.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY replied that none had been received.

Mr. WINDEYER asked whether any communication had been received from the Government relative to the imposition, by the Government of Van Diemen's Land, of a duty on our tobacco?

The COLONIAL SECRETARY replied, that no communication had been received by the Government on this subject.

Mr. WINDEYER asked if any intelligence had reached the Government on the subject of the Tariff Bill, which had been passed by the Council, but sent home with a recommendation by the Governor that it should not be allowed?

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said, that no despatches had been received on the subject, and some delay would necessarily take place, as the Bill would have to be referred to the Board of Trade.

Mr. WINDEYER asked the Colonial Secretary when it was probable that the returns relative to the sick aborigines would be laid upon the table?

The COLONIAL SECRETARY replied, that the returns extended over some ten years, and a large quantity of correspondence had to be gone over in order to prepare them; but he hoped that in a few days they would be ready.

Mr. WINDEYER enquired when the Colonial Secretary would be able to favour the House with copies of the Governor's warrants for the payment of the salaries of the Fruthonotary and the Master in Equity?

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said, that they were prepared, and should be laid on the table in the course of the day.

PUBLICANS' BILL.

On the motion of Dr. LANG, the petition against the Publicans' Bill, now before the Council, which was presented by Dr. Lang last week, was ordered to be printed.

THE LATE REGISTRAR MANNING.

Dr. BLAND, in pursuance of notice, moved that an Address be presented to his Excellency the Governor, praying him to take such steps as may be requisite to obtain compensation to the sufferers by the defalcation of the late Registrar of the Supreme Court, either from his securities or otherwise.

Dr. NICHOLSON seconded the motion for the Address.

After a brief conversation the Address was adopted without opposition, and ordered to be presented to the Governor by the Speaker and the Colonial Secretary.

COUNCIL'S CORN PETITIONS.

The Council resolved itself into a Committee to consider the draft of a petition prepared by a Select Committee of the Council, praying Her Majesty and the Home Government that Australian corn, &c., might be admitted into the home market on the same terms as Canadian wheat, &c.

The following petition was adopted clause by clause:—

To the Honorable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Legislative Council of the Colony of New South Wales, in Council assembled,

Humbly Sheweth, That your petitioners have found, that your Honorable House has granted to the provinces of Canada the privilege of importing wheat and flour into the United Kingdom, at a nominal duty; a concession which emboldens your petitioners to hope, that the same privilege will not be withheld from the colonists of Australia.

That your petitioners cannot believe that it is the intention of your Honorable House to act otherwise than with perfect equality and fairness towards every dependency of the British Crown; and feel, therefore, the fullest confidence that your Honorable House will remove the appearance, which now exists, of an intention to favour one colony above the rest.

That your petitioners have been taught to believe that it is the policy of your Honorable House to treat the colonies as integral parts of the Empire in matters of trade; and that this policy can never be carried out so long as commercial restrictions are allowed to exist a barrier between one part of the Empire and another.

That the Governor of this colony is prohibited by a despatch from the Right Honorable Lord Stanley, from giving his consent to any bill imposing differential duties upon any goods or merchandise imported into this colony. And that it appears to your Petitioners, that a rule which prevents them from distinguishing, in the amount of duty, between the produce of a British colony and a foreign State, would still more strongly negative the showing any preference to the produce of one colony over that of another.

That the colony of New South Wales has hitherto imported corn for its own consumption, not from any obstacle to agriculture presented by its soil and climate, as from the very limited market in which its produce could be disposed of. The farmer, whose calculation is based on the return of ordinary years, and who was naturally more anxious to avoid overstocks in his premises than to provide against a scarcity, being seldom in a condition to provide the consumer with grain, in case of failure of crops from drought or other causes.

That principally from this cause, viz.: the smallness of the market for its produce—the colony has frequently been in danger of famine, while possessing millions of acres of fertile land; and that it has thus been driven into a one-sided commerce with South America.

That the territory of New South Wales differs very much in soil, climate, and elevation, and that it is reasonable therefore to suppose that a failure of crops would not be universal, but that the deficiency of one part would be compensated by the abundance of another, if adequate inducement were given to general cultivation; and that the same remark applies, with still more force, to the neighbouring colonies.

That the territory of New South Wales already supplies Great Britain with one-third of the wool imported for manufacturing purposes, and that the encouragement of agriculture, so far from proving injurious to the Mother-country, would tend to their advantage, by making food abundant and steady in price, and by raising up a prosperous community, which would bear, jointly with them, the burthen of taxation.

That it is of the greatest importance to determine the minimum price of all colonial produce. This has recently been done, as to stock, by a calculation of what the hide, horns, wool, tallow, and gelatine (which the animal yields) are worth; but that no such calculation can be arrived at with regard to corn, except by supposing a market in large and steady market, like that of Great Britain.

That the distance which separates Australia from Great Britain, and the high rate at which labour must always be paid for in a colony, constitute more than an adequate protection to the British corn market against the competition of Australia; and that those doctrines of protection which spring from national and commercial rivalry, are inapplicable to parts of the same empire.

That if the quantity of corn to be exported from the Australian colonies should be insignificant when compared with the annual consumption of Great Britain, it is not, therefore, insignificant to them; and that if the importation of corn be small, it will be less likely to damage existing interests, and will find a market for itself as it increases, by the simultaneous increase of the population of the United Kingdom.

That your petitioners have been informed, that it is the intention of your Honorable House to withdraw the protection of one penny per pound, hitherto enjoyed by Australian wool, and that the same principle of free trade, by which this withdrawal is sanctioned, would equally require the duties on Australian corn, which emboldens your petitioners to hope, that the same privilege will not be withheld from the colonists of Australia.

That your petitioners cannot believe that it is the intention of your Honorable House to act otherwise than with perfect equality and fairness towards every dependency of the British Crown; and feel, therefore, the fullest confidence that your Honorable House will remove the appearance, which now exists, of an intention to favour one colony above the rest.

That the climate of Australia is peculiarly favourable to the growth of maize,—a grain, which, without coming into direct competition with the staples of the British Isles, would yet afford a cheap and wholesome diet.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray, that your Honorable House will take the premises into your favourable consideration, and cause an Act to be passed to authorise the admission of wheat, maize, meal, and flour, the produce of the Australian colonies, into the United Kingdoms, subject to the same duties respectively, as wheat and flour the produce of Canada.

It was also resolved, that the petitions should be entrusted to Mr. Hutt, M.P., to present to the House of Commons; and to the Earl of Ripon, to be presented to the House of Lords.

The House having resumed, the Council confirmed the proceedings in Committee.

RETURNS.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY presented copies of the Governor's warrants for the payment of the salaries of the Prothonotary and the Master in Equity; also returns of the number of elections in each electoral list.

The returns were ordered to be printed.

MELBOURNE CORPORATION BILL.

The House resolved itself into Committee on this Bill, and after having gone through a number of clauses the CHAIRMAN reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again on Tuesday next.

SYDNEY CORPORATION.

The further consideration in Committee of the Sydney Corporation Act Amendment Bill was postponed till Friday next, upon the motion of Mr. Cowper, who stated that he moved for such postponement on the part of Mr. Bland.

LAW OF LIBEL.

The next order of the day being for the consideration in Committee of the Law of Libel Bill,

Mr. ROBINSON moved that the Council should resolve itself into Committee for that purpose.

Mr. WINDEYER said, that he would beg to suggest to his honorable friend the member for Melbourne, the propriety of reconsidering his motion, and postponing the matter until next session, in order that they might, in the mean time, have the advantage of observing what effects had attended the changes already made in England. The whole of Lord Campbell's measures could not be introduced, as the Act of Parliament from which the present Bill had been taken was only a part of that measure, the remainder of which was still in abeyance. It was better, therefore, to wait until they saw the thing complete, than to introduce it piece by piece without any previous information as to its efficacy. He fully admitted that there were great grounds for complaint against the law of libel as it at present existed, and that some alterations in that law were very necessary; but the alterations contemplated in the Bill then before the House were of too sweeping a nature to be adopted without any information as to their probable effect. In order, therefore, to carry out his views upon this subject he should move, as an amendment, that the Bill be considered on that day six months.

Mr. ROBINSON said, that he could see no valid objection against going on with the Bill, which had been framed wholly in accordance with an act of the Imperial Parliament, amply discussed and investigated in the House of Lords before it was passed into a law. It was true there was a second bill before the Parliament, which might be considered as a part of Lord Campbell's proposition; but the second bill had merely reference to actions of libel against the Attorney-General, and did not in any wise affect the provisions of the Act previously passed. He could see no reason why the present Bill should not be passed, and in the event of any subsequent alteration being made by a second Act of Parliament he would pledge himself, if he should have the honour of a seat in that House, to bring the

has been somewhat roughly shorn, let us hope that her strength has not altogether departed from her. We have, indeed, good reason to believe that, so far at least as we are concerned, the first rays of a brighter day have already appeared. We consider, Sir, your election to the Chair of the College, in connexion with the valuable support you will receive from the gentlemen who have been elected to the offices of Treasurer and Secretary, as forming a most propitious circumstance for us. We earnestly trust, that, under your fostering care, the Institution, so endeared to our best feelings, may grow up and flourish; that in proportion as our facilities to, and our opportunities for, study are increased, our zeal may be re-invigorated; and that, in years to come, many thousands of Australia's sons may look back with us to the Sydney College, with emotions of gratitude and affection, as the scene where their earliest impressions of classic lore and scientific truth were received, and where their virtuous principles and pious aspirations were nourished and confirmed.

That you, Sir, may be long spared in health and happiness, to preside over us, and that, in all the important avocations in which you are called to engage, you may be rewarded with that success which crowns the ambition of the philanthropist, will be our sincere and constant prayer.

DR. BLAND'S REPLY.

To Thomas Henry Bain, Esquire, of St. John's College, Cambridge, Head Master, the Masters, and Students of the Sydney College.

Gentlemen,—The address which you have done me the honour to present to me is highly gratifying. For, although I attribute the encomiums which it contains rather to your generosity and friendly feelings, than to any merits of my own, yet to receive such commendations from the Head Master of a learned Institution, whose talents and acquirements are universally recognized; from his coadjutors in the noble field of educational labour—to enjoy the favourable opinions of those aspirants to literary and scientific attainments, who are enrolled on the list of its students, is cordially grateful to my feelings; and, however unworthy I may feel myself of the very high estimation which you have been generously pleased to express of my conduct and character, I shall not only treasure so cheering a [illegible] of your confidence, but I will at least [illegible] to merit it.

Gentlemen, I am fully alive to the present wants of this colony in respect to education; but the main impediments and obstacles in its way we have reason to hope are rapidly disappearing. The dreary pen d of doubt and suspicion is vanishing, and mankind have, almost with one voice, announced the conclusion, that education is not only one of the indispensable means of enhancing and extending the lights of civilization—of promoting the general happiness and welfare of our species, of whatever "caste or colour," but that it is the safest and best basis of civil government, and of moral and religious improvement.

Gentlemen, some of the very opponents to general education are becoming daily its most warm and strenuous friends and advocates—a circumstance honourable alike to the cause and to themselves; evincing, as it does, that their opposition arose solely in their zeal for those high interests above referred to, which they feared might be endangered by its introduction; but which, they are now satisfied, can be enabled to keep pace with the rapidly advancing progress of the human mind, only by those very means of which they had entertained what they now discover to be an unmerited distrust. But, Gentlemen, I must admit, that the interests of education, and of all its various objects and relations, have not stood "stationless," as you have observed, during the present unparalleled commercial and financial depression of the colony, and that the progress of education, whether in its private establishments, or in public institutions, has, doubtless, been unhappily arrested; a circumstance much to be deplored: yet we have to congratulate ourselves that this crisis, at least in respect to that Institution with which we are more particularly identified, and respecting which we, therefore, are the best informed, is also passing away, not only without having displaced it from that high position which it had hitherto maintained; but, although "roughly shorn," without having so far impaired its vigour, as, on the first resurrence of more auspicious times, to prevent that full development of its resources, as the best interests of the rising generation require.

Gentlemen, with sincere wishes for the prosperity of that Institution, of which you are respectively the scholastic managers and students, for the happiness and welfare of its Head Master, to whom it is already so deeply indebted; of his able coadjutors, and of those students who are industriously following a laudable career of literary and scientific, of moral and religious improvement within its walls; as well as for the advancement and spread of education generally throughout the land; I beg to assure you of my unabated zeal for the promotion of those important public interests, and of my unremitting, though humble, endeavours in their behalf; which, though feeble in themselves, will never fail to receive the efficient support of those gentlemen who have chosen elected to the offices of Treasurer and Secretary, and of every other gentleman connected with its management.

After reading which, the newly elected President presented each of the young gentlemen who represented their fellow-students with a very handsome book, as a memento of the occasion.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING.—We perceive that the friends of the general system of education introduced by Lord Stanley, have requested the Mayor to call a meeting on the subject, and his Worship has fixed upon Monday evening next. The same evening had been previously fixed upon by the clergy of the Church of England for a meeting of the friends of education on Church principles, and as it will be extremely inconvenient to have the two meetings on the same evening, we hope the Mayor will fix on another evening for his meeting.

THE DEVEREUX ASYLUM.—Last night there were 410 indoor patients, and 158 persons on the books out of the house, making a total of 568 persons obtaining assistance from that institution.

COLLECTORS OF THE CITY LISTS.—The following notice appears in yesterday's Government Gazette:—"Town Clerk's Office, Sydney, 24th August, 1844.—Notice is hereby given, that the Right Worshipful the Mayor has appointed the following parties to be collectors of the Alms lists for the city of Sydney, for the year 1844, and 1845, in terms of the 18 section of the Act of Council, 4 Victoria, No. 2, viz., Benjamin Remyre, Gipps' Ward; John O. Austin, Phillip's Ward; Richard Binnie, Brisbane Ward; John Rowley, Bourke Ward; John Layton, Macquarie and Cook Wards. By order of the Right Worshipful the Mayor, JOHN RAE, Town Clerk."

THE BARRACK SQUARE.—When the public is to be deprived of any privileges to which they have long been accustomed due notice should be given. For the last eight or nine years all parties have been allowed to walk across the grass in the Barrack Square whenever they pleased; but recently an order has been given to "keep off the grass!" and if they enter at the eastern gate and wish to get out at either the northern or the southern, they are obliged to hang up the centre path until they arrive at the top of the square, and then walk straight to the gate, instead of cutting across the grass plats and saving a considerable distance. Why this order has been given we do not know, nor is it of much consequence; but we must complain of no notice having been given of the alteration, to parties walking there they have been in the habit of walking for many years, are suddenly accosted by the sentries or guard in a tone and manner by no means agreeable, and directed to keep on the roads, whereas a notice placed at each of the gates would prevent people from breaking the rule.

RESIGNATION BY THE "TRAVELLER."—Three-fourths of the Traveller's emigrants are English, and almost exclusively from the agricultural districts, only four out of the whole number of men are mechanics, the rest are regular farm servants and shepherds, of as good a description as England produces. The children are mostly over seven years old. They will be ready for engagement on Thursday morning, when the ship will be in the Cove.

BERRIMA QUARTER SESSIONS.—A Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace will be holden at the Court House, Berrima, on Thursday, the 29th of August.

BERRIMA CIRCUIT COURT.—This Court will commence its sittings on Monday next, the second of September, before Mr. Justice Stephen. There are no civil cases for trial. The following is the criminal calendar: Wounding with intent to murder, 1 case, 1 prisoner; forgery, 2 cases, 3 prisoners; robbery with arms, 3 cases, 8 prisoners; robbery with arms, and receiving stolen property, 1 case, 2 prisoners; cattle-stealing, 6 cases, 9 prisoners; cattle-stealing and receiving the stolen cattle, 1 case, 2 prisoners; breaking into, entering, and stealing from a dwelling-house, 1 case, 2 prisoners; murder, 1 case, 1 prisoner; horse-stealing, 4 cases, 4 prisoners; larceny, 1 case, 1 prisoner; total, 21 cases, 31 prisoners, viz.: 5 free, 17 freed, 4 ticket-of-leave, and 1 convict under sentence, all for trial.

AGRICULTURAL MEETING OF THE MAGISTRATES.—Pursuant to adjournment last Wednesday, a meeting of the magistrates who then met, will be held in the magistrates room, at the Police Office, this day, at noon, to dispose of such business under the Licensing Act as stands over from last meeting.

BLANCH'S GEORGE-STREET PROPERTY.—To render a comprehensive view of this valuable estate, Mr. Stubbs refers intending buyers to the advertisement itself. He feels it a duty he owes the public, however, to state concisely, that either the one or the other, Cohen's, Benham's, Bowden's, Russell's, or the store, is a good fortune for any man. It is in every day's experience the disproportionate advantage to be derived from the banks now-a-days, whilst houses in the City, as they stands in estimation, must rise in value in proportion, and from a capitalist just arrived, it appears large funds are expected from England for investment in this colony; it is therefore self-evident that the present purchasers of property like this will now be receiving good rentals, and have the advantage of asking what price they choose hereafter.

I'll tell you the plan for gaining of money

Or buy a good farm—and, we'll now in—" crease"

You're brown'd—if you miss " BLANCH'S" this morning.

INVESTMENT OF CAPITAL.—The attention of capitalists and others is hereby drawn to the important sales of landed and other properties advertised to take place to-morrow and on Friday, at eleven o'clock each day, at Mr S. Lyons' Auction Mart. The properties for sale to-morrow comprise one hundred acres of land near Laguna, Wollombi; thirteen acres at Glebe Point, Johnson's Bay; three allotments of the Five Dock Farm, with the Red House Inn; building allotments on the Bello Retiro estate; thirty-six building allotments at Darlinghurst; the Balgownie estate near Wollongong;—and on Friday, the 30th instant, two handsome city residences in Fort-street; one ditto ditto in Prince-street; building allotments in Fort-street and Victoria-terrace; five hundred acres in the county of Durham. Parties wishing to employ their capital with perfect security, and at a remunerating interest, ought not to let this favourable opportunity escape. Since the colonial and also the English banks have ceased to allow interest on deposits, the best chance for a profitable employment of capital is to purchase landed, and especially city properties, at the present reduced prices.—Commercial.

SWEARING.—About half-past five o'clock last night, Mrs. Handy, of Union-street, left her house for a short time without locking the door, when James Finnigan, free by servitude, and under agreement to proceed to Moreton Bay as a hired servant, slipped into the house, helped himself to three shillings and a handkerchief, with which he made off, and was entering the house a second time when he was observed and given into custody; during the time he was detained for the constable, he offered to return the money and the handkerchief provided he was allowed to depart; but his proposal was not acceded to. On being searched at the watch-house the money was found on him, but there was no handkerchief.

COMMITTALS.—David Lazarus and William Smith, both free by servitude, were yesterday both committed to take their trial for stealing £118 from the person of Rachel Weldon, in her dwelling-house, York-street, on Sunday last. John Usher, lately free, was also committed for stealing a bottle of lemon syrup from the taproom of the Edinburgh Castle, on the evening of Saturday last. Helen M'Grath, of Cumberland-street, charged with going on the preceding day into Parvee and Hadden's butchery shop, at the corner of Essex and Cumberland streets, during the absence of the owners, and helped herself from the sailing tub to a piece of pork, value one shilling; a girl, who saw her take the pork, gave information to Pearce on his return to the shop, when he followed the prisoner, and on his coming up with her she dropped the pork:—she was committed for trial.

INQUESTS.—Yesterday afternoon a Coroner's enquiry took place in Mr. James Gannon's public-house, "The Sportsman," corner of Phillip and Hunter streets, on the body of John Carr, free by servitude, who had died in the General Hospital under the following circumstances: He had been received into the General Hospital on Friday evening in a state of delirium, and died about three o'clock on Sunday morning. It appeared the deceased was a shoemaker in the employ of Barton, of Brickfield Hill, was very much addicted to drinking, and had been on a drunken spree for about three weeks previous to his being received into the Hospital. Dr. Harnett having certified that death had been caused by delirium tremens, the Jury returned a verdict of died of delirium tremens, caused by previous intoxication. A second inquest was also held in Mr. George Sherbin's public-house, the "Steam Engine," Brickfield-hill, on the body of an infant named James Neal, lying dead at Ultimo, when the following evidence was given:—Mary Leonard, living at the Higher Mills, Victoria-terrace, deposed: I know the mother of the deceased, who lives in the same house with me; she was confined between nine and ten o'clock on Sunday evening; I heard the deceased; during her confinement she was attended by a Mrs. Holt, a midwife, who lives in the same street; the deceased lived till this morning; I saw him when stripped; there was no mark on him, except a swelling on the stomach; I saw his mother at the well on the night of Saturday last getting some water, and a woman whom I believe to be the woman here present, but I cannot say positively, who said to Mrs. Neil, do you know me you [illegible], and at the same time gave Mrs. Neil a blow with her fist, and then threw her down on the stones; after Mrs. Neil had got up she came towards the outside corner of this house, and while there she was again attacked and knocked down by the same woman. Ellen Mills, from Victoria-terrace, deposed: About half-past eleven o'clock on Saturday night a woman came by my door screaming in a very violent manner; she then went up to where Mrs. Neil was standing, when Mrs. Neil said to her, do you know me, upon which the women replied, I do not you [illegible]; and immediately commenced beating Mrs. Neil, and knocked her down; I saw Mrs. Neil pass me shortly after, when there was blood streaming from her; I cannot swear that the prisoner was the woman who attacked and illused Mrs. Neil. Mrs. Bridget Holt deposed: I saw Mrs. Neil on the afternoon of Sunday, and on the same evening she gave birth to the deceased; he was not breathing, but on applying restorative measures respiration began; the birth took place prematurely by five or six weeks: I examined the mother's body this day, and found marks of violence on it; the mother complained of the consequences of the hurt she had received until the time the deceased was born; Mrs. Neil and the woman who attacked her on Saturday night were both drunk. Dr. Daniel Joseph Tierney deposed: I have examined the body of the deceased and made a post mortem examination; I found no marks of violence, either externally or internally; on examining the mother I found injuries to an extent which would cause premature labour; the child was not at maturity, which I think caused death; the mother is at present in a precarious state. The coroner summed up at considerable length, instructing the jury, that although there was no evidence to fix the assault on the woman in custody, yet if they believed the evidence they would be warranted in finding a verdict of wilful murder against some person unknown. The Jury, after considerable consultation, returned a verdict of died in consequence of injuries received by the mother before deceased was born.—A third inquisition was held in Mr. Joseph Lahorn's public-house, opposite the Benevolent Asylum, Parramatta-street, on the body of Patrick Kelloghan, labourer, aged twenty-four years, who arrived per ship Moffit in the year 1839, when the following evidence was adduced. Charles Smith, labourer, living on Mr. Holmes's ground, Liverpool Road, deposed: I live between the Dove Inn and Mrs. Chisholm's property; in the course of the night my neighbour heard some one coosing in the bush, and in the morning I and another man went a little way into the bush, when we saw a naked man lying down on his back; when we came up to him we found a large log of wood lying on his right leg and pinning him fast to the ground; with great exertion we got the log moved off his leg; there was a boot on each leg, which was all the covering he had; after we got him free he was able to stand and speak; the first thing he did was to ask for a drink of water; I left him in the care of the other man while I ran home for a pot of tea, a shirt, and a pair of trousers; we then brought him to the Dove Inn, it being the nearest public-house. He gave an account of himself by stating, that he had lately been in the employ of Sir John Jamison, but was then travelling in search of work; that on the proceeding evening he called at Falconer and Beales' public houses, for lodging for the night, but not having the means of paying for it, he could not obtain it; he then lay down on fire in the bush, he made towards it for shelter and to keep himself warm for the night, as it was very wet; that while he was sitting close to the burning tree it gave way in different directions, and part of it on fire fell on him, had ignited his clothes, and burned them entirely off him. On looking among the ashes where we got him, we found his pipe and some buttons; he was very severely burned on several parts of the body, and in the course of the day he was taken to the Benevolent Asylum. Jonathan Watson, District Constable, hearing of the deceased being found in the bush went to see him, and found him sitting in the verandah of Dear's public-house; he appeared very ill, being burned on several parts of the body; he was also very stiff, having been out, he said, in the rain during the greater part of the night; he was hardly able to speak; I conveyed him in a cart to the Benevolent Asylum. Mr. Alexander Cuthill, surgeon to the Benevolent Asylum, deposed: The deceased was received there as a patient on the 5th instant; he had been severely burned in different parts of the body, and had several of his ribs broken on the right side; death ensued on the 27th instant, and was caused by the effects of the injuries I have mentioned. The Jury found that death had been caused by injuries received by accident.

THE STATE TRIAL.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH, DUBLIN.
THE QUEEN v. O'CONNELL AND OTHERS.

The arguments in support of the application for a new trial in this case were resumed on Thursday by Mr. Fitzgibbon, who spoke the whole day. On Friday Mr. M'Dough addressed the Court on behalf of Mr. Barrett, and was followed by the Attorney-General, who did not conclude his reply till Saturday afternoon, just before the rising of the Court. When he had finished, Mr. Whiteside applied for permission to reply upon several new points raised by the Attorney-General, contrary to a previous understanding. The application was resisted by the Attorney-General, and the Court postponed a decision on the point till Monday morning. Monday morning came, and, through some mistake, it passed over without a single allusion to the subject in any way whatever, the Court devoting all its attention to other business.

On Tuesday, the Court was densely crowded, in the full expectation that the Judges would come to some decision on the subject which had so long occupied their attention. The curiosity of the public was not diminished by the knowledge of its fact, which, more transpired, that the Judges had been in chamber before the hour for sitting, and as the appearance of the Judge Jurors was delayed much beyond the usual period, it began to be suspected that there was some truth in the rumour that their Lordships were equally divided as to the motion for a new trial. Mr. Justice Perrin took his seat on the bench about half-past eleven o'clock, and proceeded to read the seven notes of the learned Judge. In a short time after Judges Perrin and Crampton entered, wearing the appearance (it was remarked) of men who had been intensely engaged in warm discussion. The Bar had scarcely made their bow to their Lordships, when "silence" was again called for the Lord Chief Justice. At this time the Court was very full. All the law officers and counsel engaged for the Crown, Mr. Kennedy, the Crown Solicitor, some of the counsel for the defence, and few of the barristers only (Mr. Burke and Mr. Tierney were in their usual places).

A motion of course was being heard, for it was Judge day, when, without waiting for his counsel,

The Chief Justice said: Mr. Attorney-General.

The Attorney-General instantly rose.

The Chief Justice continued: Mr. Attorney-General, I am sorry to inform you that the Court find they cannot give judgment in this (the Lordship paused for an instant)—in the case, until next term.

Bustling were those words uttered, when the Attorney-General dropped as it were almost imperceptibly back into his seat—looks glanced at each other and smiles—and there an universal rush took place from the Court.

There was a rumour prevalent about the Hall that the Judges of the Queen's Bench intend, before delivering judgment, to consult with their brethren in the other Courts.

Trinity Term commences on the 22nd instant.

THE BANKING SYSTEM.

(From the Atlas, May 11.)

On Monday night, Mr Robert Peel, brought forward his promised measure for reforming the banking system and circulation of the country. The leading features of the plan may be also described. To adopt the idea which has been so generally advocated of separating the functions of the great National bank of issue from those of a bank of discount and deposit, but retains the Bank of England as the instrument through which the issue of national paper money is to be made. Henceforward the business of the Bank of England is to be conducted by separate officers, and kept entirely distinct from the department of ordinary banking business. This is the first great reform.

The second is to establish a solid basis for the paper circulation which, it thus is to be created. For this purpose, it is provided that the circulation shall consist entirely of paper issued in exchange for bullion actually deposited, which (no more) of an invertible amount of £14,000,000, which is to be issued upon the security of the debt owing by the Government to the Bank, and of the present circulation of the country Banks, which is to be maintained but not extended. The paper currency of the country will, therefore, consist—first, of an amount of notes equal to about £20,000,000 or £21,000,000, payable in specie on demand, but issued on the security of credit, Government stock, or other property; and, secondly, of a further sum consisting of notes which are, in point of fact, simply taxes for an equivalent quantity of bullion actually lying in the vaults of the issue department of the Bank of England. It is calculated, and, according to all experience, with perfect justice, that the expansion and contraction of this fluctuating portion of the circulation with the natural demands of commerce, will be amply sufficient to meet any fluctuations that may arise from the varying course of trade, and of the foreign exchanges. Suppose a period of over-speculation and fictitious prosperity leading to an unfavorable state of the foreign exchanges and drain of bullion. The currency would contract itself by the operation of the demand for bullion for exportation, until it reached the point at which the process was arrested and the course of the exchanges turned. Unless we could suppose a contraction from one to less than £20,000,000—by two thirds of the ordinary circulation of the country—repudiate, in order to turn the exchanges in our favour, an amount of contraction infinitely greater than has been found requisite even in the most urgent crises of 1826 and 1837, no bankruptcy or stoppage of cash payments could ensue. Under this system, therefore, there is every reason to hope that the paper circulation of the country will continue permanently in the state in which it accurately represents the conditions of a metallic currency, and that whenever fluctuations may take place will be precisely those would have taken place if the medium of exchange had consisted exclusively of gold and silver. It inadvertently an exception to the general principles upon which Sir R. Peel has proceeded, in allow any part of the circulation to remain in the hands of private country banks of issue. He has felt, and we think wisely, that for the sake of obtaining uniformity and pushing out a principle so its rigorous conclusions, it was not worth while to interfere rudely with existing interests, and to incur the risk of serious political embarrassment. There is a strong body of evidence to prove that the business of local districts could not always be conveniently carried on by means of a paper money originating exclusively on the creditation of the great money market of the metropolis, and that it is essential for the convenience of their customers that the country banks should not be absolutely deprived of the privilege of issuing their own notes. Under the proposed limitation there seems no danger of the continuance of this privilege leading to any inconvenient results, since the present amount of country circulation, which is very moderate, is not to be exceeded in future, and, if withdrawn, it would have to be replaced by a corresponding amount of paper money issued by the Bank of England upon some description of security.

The third leading feature of Sir Robert Peel's plan is to establish the principle that the nation is entitled to the profit arising from the national paper circulation. This principle is carried into effect by compounding with the Bank of England for an annual payment of £60,000, to be made in respect of the profits accruing from the portion of the circulation which is to be issued in exchange for bullion over and above the £14,000,000 issued on the security of the Bank loan. Of the soundness of this principle there can, we imagine, be little doubt, and that it has been carried into operation equitably towards the Bank may be presumed from the concurrence of the directors of that body, who have shown no disposition to neglect the interests of their constituents.

The fourth leading feature is to enforce the most perfect publicity of accounts in regard to anything affecting the circulation. The Bank of England, and all country banks of issue, are to publish weekly statements of their amount of notes in circulation, bullion, and other particulars requisite to ensure entire publicity. This is a commercial country like England, where every remarkable operation depends so materially on the state of the circulation and the money market, is a highly salutary provision, and will go far to obviate the recurrence of those disastrous monetary crises which have come like sudden blights in the midst of periods of apparent prosperity.

In addition to these leading features, the measure contains some important and valuable details. For instance, the restrictive legal disabilities attaching to banking and other joint-stock companies are to be removed, and the prohibition, so long and justly complained of by the London joint-stock banks, against accepting bills at the ordinary date, is to be abolished.

On the whole, our impression is that the measure is a bold and capable one, likely to do extensive good with, and interfering injuriously with existing interests, or with the usual course of business. It is very much the sort of measure we had expected from Sir R. Peel, who, whatever may be his other defects as a statesman, is undoubtedly a cautious, able, and intelligent financier, accustomed to deal with the question of circulation both theoretically and practically. In 1819 he began his career as a statesman by introducing a system to cash payments, and to the sound principles of circulation laid down by the lamented bullion committee. In 1844 he completes the edifice of which he then laid the foundation stone, and, whatever may be his other failures and shortcomings, may fairly hope that his name will, at any rate, descend to posterity as the reformer of the British currency.

MAY MEETINGS.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.—The fortieth anniversary meeting of this Society was held on Wednesday in Exeter Hall, under the presidency of Lord Bexley. The meeting was not probably so well attended as on former occasions, for the room was but more than three-fourths filled. The Secretary read the report for the year, in which it was stated that the Society had now translated the Bible into 156 languages and dialects, and had, during the past year, issued nearly a million copies. The total receipts of the year were £86,000.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this Society was held on Wednesday evening, in the great room, Exeter Hall. Capsula Sir E. Parry, R.N., presided. The Honorable W. Cowper, M.P., Sir J. P. Pulteney, M.P., Mr. G. Finch, Mr. Labouchere, the Rev. A. Thelwall, and a great number of the lay and clerical friends of the Society, were on the platform. The Secretary read the report, which gave a detailed account of the Society's operations in New South Wales, Western Africa, the Cape of Good Hope, the Bahama Islands, and various other parts of the world. The total receipts and donations received during the past year amounted to £176, exclusive of collections in the colonies. The report was adopted; and several resolutions having been proposed and spoken to by Mr. G. Finch, the Rev. Mr. J. Labouchere, Mr. Hoare, and Rev. R. Ford, &c., the meeting separated.

BIBLICAL SOCIETY.—On Thursday, May 2, the annual meeting of the friends and subscribers to the Prayer-book and Bible Society, was held in the Lower room, Exeter Hall. Rumsey, the object of the society was to circulate among Indians, Chinese, Siberians, and boatmen, by clergymen, missionaries, and others, the book of Common Prayer, and all other works of the Church. The chair was taken by Joseph Wilson, Esq. From the secretary's report, it appeared, that the receipts from the 31st of March, 1843, were £1,786 16s. 6d., a falling off of £1,000 from the receipts of last year. The meeting then broke up.—The same day the Thirty-sixth anniversary meeting of the Society for promoting Christianity amongst the Jews, was preached at the Spanish chapel, Crown Street, Soho, in aid of the Society. The Bishop of Ripon delivered the usual weekly sermon before the Society in London and Liverpool. The last report showed the Jews's income to be £18,000 in aid. The Bishop of London delivered an anti-popish speech at the festivities of which a collection was made. The annual meeting of the Sunday School Union was held in Exeter-hall, on the 1st of May, Mr. Hindley, M.P., took the chair. On the reading of the accounts, it appeared that 147,800 Ts. 9d. had been received by the Committee and, the cash balance in hand, after paying all the debts, of the book depots £1,000 Ts. 7d., and the balance of the stock depots £1,000 Ts. 7d., the receipts from other sources £1,787 6s. 8d., and the balance in hand, £18 7s. 10d. There was a very unpopular council at the end of the proceedings, whether the church catechism should be said or not. One party thought it would produce pain, but it was at length decided not to sell any denominational formulas. The Church Pastoral Aid Society held its eighth annual meeting on Tuesday, at Exeter Hall, the Earl Captain Wallingtons being the chairman, instead of Lord Ashley, who had been announced. During the year 1843 new grants had been voted amounting to £3,010; the year's income was £21,288 8s. 6d., an increase of £1,300 over those of the year before: 166 clergymen had added their names as subscribers, and the whole number now was 4,003. The year's expenditure was £19,473 18s. 8d.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the members of this society was held on Monday at Exeter Hall. The right honorable the Earl of Chichester presided, and was supported by the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Chichester, the Bishop of Ripon, Viscount Sandon, M.P., Sir R. H. Inglis, M.P., C. P. Thompson, Esq., M.P., Rev. Professor Scholefield, Rev. J. W. Cunningham, Rev. Dr. Harth, Rev. Hugh Stowell, the Dean of Salisbury, Sir G. Rose, the honorable Mr. Waldegrave, &c. The noble chairman congratulated the members on the favorable aspect of the Society's affairs, and briefly reviewed its operations during the last year. The Rev. Mr. Davies read the report. It commenced by referring to the embarrassments under which the society had unfortunately laboured two years since through want of support. These difficulties had entirely disappeared, without curtailing any of the stations, with the exception of the one at Jamaica, and that not to a very great extent. The operations of the society during the past year had extended to various parts of Africa, American, and the Indies, and to various other parts of Asia Minor. Missions had also been formed on the coast of the Mediterranean, and in connexion with the missions, schools had in some cases been founded. In one instance, the Mohammedan population had been formed in addition to eighteen Juvenile branches. The receipts towards the general fund were £97,791 5s. 7d., the special fund and China fund amounted to £1,556 19s. 10d.; the capital fund was £9,618 1s. 8d.—rent for building, &c., £1,181 17s.; the total receipts, including sundry items not classed, for the year, were £104,252 14s. 10d. The expenditure of the year was £97,617 7s. The report was adopted, and towards the building fund for Sierra Leone, a sum of £1,000 had been granted, in addition to a sum previously appropriated to that purpose, making altogether £2,000. The Bishop of Chichester, the Rev. Professor Scholefield, the Rev. Hugh Stowell, and other gentlemen addressed the meeting in support of various resolutions.

Meeting of the Methodists.—Protestant Association. The annual meeting of the members and friends of this association was held at Exeter hall on Wednesday morning; the chair was taken by Sir T. P. Pemberton, M.P. From the report of the secretary we learn that the receipts for the last year amounted to £2,118 1s. 8d. The expenditure had been £1,891 1s. 8d., leaving a balance of £226 0s. 7d. in hand, besides the value of the stock. The meeting separated, after singing the doxology.—St. Paul's school: The opposition to the present year of this institution took place on Wednesday, and was most numerously attended than on occasions to have seen it for some time. The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Durham and Lichfield, the Dean of Peterborough, the Hon. Baron, and several other gentlemen, entered the schoolroom at two o'clock, and having taken their seats, the speeches and resolutions were immediately commenced. After the return had been read, the Archbishop of Canterbury moved the best master on the professorship of his archdiocese, and, in the name of himself and the two eight reversed prelates by whom he was accompanied, he asked for three days holidays for the boys, which being granted, the meeting broke up.—Charity house Repair Infirmary: This anniversary dinner of this institution took place on Wednesday, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate street. The Company was larger than was ever overpowered. Rowland Tennet, Esq., presided. It appeared, that out of 2,000 patients who had been admitted into this institution, no fewer than 2,801 had been discharged cured, or effectually relieved. The total sum in of subscriptions reached nearly £1,000.—London Infirmary, for the Cure of Diseases of the Skin: The friends of this institution held a meeting on Wednesday, at the Hall of Commerce, for the purpose of removing the site of their institution to some more eligible place, as the patients had so increased that the present building was not large enough. A committee was formed to consider the subject. Lord Ferrersion took the chair, and in the course of his remarks after dinner, said that for the last few years the funds of the charity had fallen off considerably, and that the expenses of this year had greatly exceeded the income, the sum collected being only £300 4s. 8d., while the expenditure had amounted to no less than £1,314 14s. 11d., showing a deficiency of £784 10s. 3d. In order to meet the deficiency of the receipts, and to provide for the expenditure, the committee had been compelled to sell out the sum of £700 stock, still leaving a balance of £84 9s. 8d. due to the treasurer, and this, too, in addition to the sum of £700 stock sold in 1841, which the committee had never found themselves in a condition to replace. The annual subscribed was stated by the secretary to be upwards of £300.—The annual meeting of the Government Reformatory Institution was held at the Hanover-square Rooms, on Thursday. The active receipts for the year had been £1,453 17s. 4d., and including the expenditure, a balance of £972 3s. 11d. remained with the treasurer—a most flourishing state of the funds. The forty-ninth annual meeting of the Missionary Society was numerously attended. From the secretary's report the receipts of the year amounted to £81,815, the expenditure to £80,172, showing an excess of disbursements over income of £1711. The subscriptions this year, however, were expected to be larger than last, and the expenditure less.—The annual meeting of the Female Servants' Home Society, was held on Thursday, at Exeter hall. The society aims to let unemployed ladies have enabled to open another home for female servants out of place, of which it is calculated there are 1500 in London in Mission-garden. The balance, we are happy to hear, is on the right side of the treasurer's account.—The Festival of the Sons of the Clergy took place in St. Paul's cathedral on Thursday, and we were glad to find that a very proper alteration has been made in the manner of conducting it this year. Instead of the great ecclesiastical arrangement, the prelates have retained only the simple performance of a full anthemed service, with no instrumental accompaniment, and no sermon. The good taste of this will be evident to all. The attendance was very good.

ANTI-STATE CHURCH CONFERENCE.—On Tuesday, delegates from all parts of England, Ireland, and Scotland, met at the Crown and Anchor, Strand, forming a representation for the purpose of considering the best means of obtaining the severance of Church and State, and to put further means for the furtherance of this object. Upwards of 1200 delegates were present, amongst whom were Dr. Bowring, M.P., Mr. Thomas Crawford, M.P., Sir R. Peel, Bart., M.P., Joseph Brown, Wallingford, Esq. The noble chairman congratulated the members on the favorable aspect of the Society's affairs, and briefly reviewed its operations during the last year. The Rev. Mr. Davies read the report. It commenced by referring to the embarrassments under which the society had unfortunately laboured two years since through want of support. These difficulties had entirely disappeared, without curtailing any of the stations, with the exception of the one at Jamaica, and that not to a very great extent. The operations of the society during the past year had extended to various parts of Africa, American, and the Indies, and to various other parts of Asia Minor. Stations had also been formed on the coast of the Mediterranean, and in connexion with the stations, schools had in some cases been founded. In one instance, the Mohammedan population had been formed in addition to eighteen Juvenile branches. The receipts towards the general fund were £97,791 5s. 7d., the special fund and China fund amounted to £1,556 19s. 10d.; the capital fund was £9,618 1s. 8d.—rent for building, &c., £1,181 17s.; the total receipts, including sundry items not classed, for the year, were £104,252 14s. 10d. The expenditure of the year was £97,617 7s. The report was adopted, and towards the building fund for Sierra Leone, a sum of £2
